

ABSTRACT

A system and method for performing automated negotiation processing in an electronic trading server are described. Users enter negotiation parameters and select one or more securities of interest for trading. An agent performs negotiations on behalf of the 5 user in an automated fashion in accordance with the negotiation parameters. Users may monitor system information and the progress of their own agents through graphical displays of information and may modify the negotiation parameters during the negotiation process.